

Home Medical Equipment

Wearing the wrong Positive Air Pressure (PAP) mask can lead to incomplete sleep therapy, slipping your mask off in your sleep or a restless night.

Memorial Hermann Home Medical Equipment offers different PAP mask types for your needs and convenience. Most CPAP users find a comfortable fit with one of these three main mask types: Nasal, Full and Pillow.

This image guide may help you pick the right mask option for you.*

* This is a general guide of the types of masks offered by Memorial Hermann Home Medical Equipment and should only be taken as basic tip considerations when re-ordering your PAP supplies. Selecting a mask is a highly personalized choice and should be discussed with your doctor to determine which type will best fit your specific sleep therapy needs.

Nasal Masks

Delivers airflow to the nasal area, but not directly inside. Typically covers the entire nose, but may cradle underneath the nostrils.

May work best for:

- People who like to read or watch TV before bed
- CPAP users who toss-and-turn
- Back sleepers, side sleepers, active sleepers
